

July 9, 2011

Comment on the Acquisition of T-Mobile by AT&T

To whom it may concern,

The announcement by Verizon to end on July 7th unlimited internet/data access plans and begin charging consumers based on bandwidth usage for data is a reason why AT&T's announced acquisition of T-Mobile must not be allowed to happen. Verizon is likely taking the step believing competitors will follow suit since this will translate to greater profits for the limited number of remaining mobile data services providers. The FCC must not approve this acquisition. It has already allowed too much concentration where these same companies are creating a version of the monopoly held by AT&T in the past.

Very truly yours,
Florence Pepper